

Workers and residents affected as more care companies collapse

Denmark

(May 2017) Around 200 workers and the 1100 people they provide care for are the latest victims of private care company bankruptcies. The collapse of Hjemmehjælpen Aarhus, the largest private care company in Aarhus, Denmark's second city, is the third private care company bankruptcy in May and the 41st since 2013 when a new tendering system was introduced. The FOA public service union is calling for a change to the system with requirements to monitor professional and management skills, company finances and to protect working conditions.
