

Union campaigns over threat to temporary workers

 Italy

The FP CGIL union federation is running a campaign in opposition to government plans to slash temporary employment in the public sector. The campaign will include a day of strike action on 13 February and the focus of the protests is the so-called Brunetta amendment that ostensibly sets out to reduce precarious employment in the public sector but whose immediate impact will be to make some 60,000 workers redundant from next July.
