

Massive support for action over job evaluation

 Ireland

(August 2016) Just under nine out of 10 clerical, administrative and managerial workers in the health service have voted for industrial action if a job evaluation scheme is not reinstated. The scheme was suspended during the austerity measures negotiated with the Irish government but with a commitment to reinstate the scheme from 1 June this year but so far the Health Service Executive The scheme can lead to regrading where jobs have changed but all claims have effectively been suspended for the past eight years.
