

Water movement calls on European Parliament not to ratify CETA

(10 February 2017)

The letter points out the CETA endangers freshwater resources and water services at both sides of the Atlantic and argues that “ The Joint Interpretative Instrument fails to address the shortcomings of the agreement and paints an unreasonably optimistic picture about CETA. There is no legally safe new commitment or clarification in the text. We will only know the real potential of CETA provisions when decisions from public authorities or public water companies are clarified at a later stage. We cannot take that risk.”

EPSU is a member of the European Water Movement and the Canadian union CUPE works with the Blue Planet project www.blueplanetproject.net

For the letter in EN - FR - ES - IT

- Log in to post comments

- Printer-friendly version

Policies

Trade

Water

Other organizations

NGOs