

Negotiations in municipal sector underway

 Netherlands

The long-running dispute in the municipal sector has still not been resolved but unions and employers are negotiating. Further negotiations took place on 11 May and although an agreement was not finalised, there were hopes that a deal would be agreed soon. In the meantime unions are maintaining their protests and industrial action. Refuse workers and street cleaners in Amsterdam and Utrecht have been on strike in protest at the employers' attempts to impose a pay freeze.
