

Health and safety body endorses union's protocol on tackling violence

 Spain

The UGT confederation has developed procedures for workplace action to deal with bullying and violence. The union has brought together research on the subject with practical examples and information from collective agreements and the procedure aims at both preventing and responding to violence and harassment. The protocol has been endorsed by the national health and safety body, the INSHT, which has issued guidance on dealing with violence and harassment at work.
