The current models are not sustainable

“If not addressed properly, current deficits in care work and its quality will create a severe and unsustainable global care crisis and further increase gender inequalities in the world of work.”

- ILO, 2018

“Social protection against the risk of long-term care dependence is needed for equity and efficiency reasons.”

- SPC/EC, 2014

“At present, wages in the LTC sector are low and working conditions not particularly attractive.”

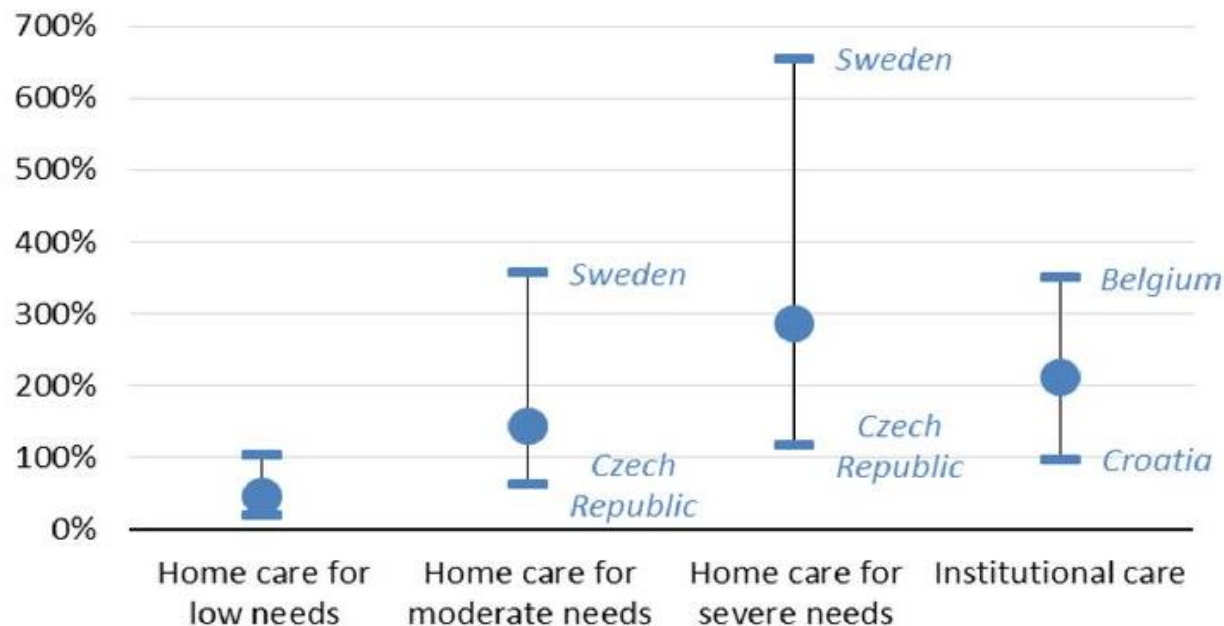

- SPC/EC, 2014

“Formal long-term care provision needs to be expanded greatly in most Member States, improving access to a range of flexible options.”

- Eurofound, 2019

In the absence of social protection, LTC quickly becomes unaffordable

Europe lacks 2.3 million carers

The lack of carers is growing in many states

EPSU's Priorities

- Support collective bargaining in the sector to improve working conditions as well as remuneration and render work in the LTC sector more attractive.
- Set up a sectoral social dialogue structure on European level to find common approaches to topics like DI, diversity, migration etc.
- Eradicate gender-based stereotypes and rebalance the workforce as well as management levels.
- Create a right to care by investing in public social protection systems to ensure access, affordability and quality of LTC.
- Prevent the marketisation and commercialization of LTC services, which lead to inequalities in access and underinvestment in quality facilities or trained staff.
- Ensure that informal carers are supported by well-funded LTC services wherever needed.

Thank you!
