

Getting to grips with digitalisation - fourth Congress briefing

(16 January 2019) Digitalisation has the potential to positively transform public services and the jobs of public service workers. Quicker and easier access to services and increased participation of citizens can be combined with better quality jobs as repetitive work is replaced with more fulfilling tasks. Digitalisation has benefits but also poses risks and it is important for trade unions to deal with the potential downside. This fourth briefing shows how by asserting their rights to information and consultation and using collective bargaining, trade unions can get the best from the digital transformation.

Further briefings will be published over the coming weeks and months. We expect that they will assist in preparing delegates and others for the crucial debates we face.
